CONVENTION BLOCKED BY BITTER FIGHT ON LEAGUE PLANK

VOTING HELD OFF TILL FRIDAY

Candidates' Forces Busy As Nominating Speeches End

DARK HORSES AGAIN LOOM

Wilson May Take Hand to Break Deadlock

SAN FRANCISCO. (By Associated Press.)—Prospects for balloting late Thursday for presidential candidates went glimmering as the delegates to the Democratic national convention assembled for the fourth day's session. A long, bitter fight over the league of nations declaration in which the supporters of President Wilson were forced to accept an amendment to the administration plank before it could be adopted, so delayed the work of the platform committee that there is little likelihood the delegates will get down to balloting before Friday.

The platform committee worked until nearly daylight over the league plank and then sought a few hours rest before resuming deliberations. Refreshed by its overnight breathing spell, the convention Thursday went back with renewed vigor to the business of winding up nominating speeches.

Wednesday's whirlwind eight hour session having placed 10 candidates formally in nomination, only one speech remained on the program to be heard Thursday before the report of the resolutions committee reporting the party platform.

Frankly admitting that McAdoo seemed to have the inside track on the race for the nomination, the inner circle of old line Democratic leaders worked thru the night devising means to stop his nomination and find a candidate who could command the necessary two-thirds vote.

Champ Clark, former speaker of the house of representatives, who was denied the nomination at the Baltimore convention after repeatedly having received a majority, something unprecedented in Democratic party history, was being discussed by the old line leaders as a possibility about whom they might rally.

DARK HORSE TALKED

The answer of the McAdoo people to that move was that if an inner circle combination forestalled the nomination of the former secretary of the treasury, there would be disclosed another coalition, which would produce a Wilson backed dark horse who could make enough concessions to win.

The name of Homer S. Cummings, chairman of the Democratic national committee, cropped out whenever the administration dark horses were being discussed. The name of Vice President Marshall was generally linked with that of Champ Clark, when "combination" candidates were discussed among the old liners.

Managers for Cox and Palmer when they figured in these discussions invariably demanded to be shown that their candidates were out of the running. Former Representative Carlin, Palmer's chief of staff, refused to collect the attorney general could not be nominated and E. H. Moore of Youngstown, the Cox field marshal, said:

"This may be a grasshopper convention but I haven't been informed as yet that any of the Cox delegates are going to jump."

COMBINE HINTED

Nevertheless, the report persisted that there was some kind of an understanding between Cox and Palmer and that the managers of these candidates favored the nomination of any one rather than McAdoo, and they wanted the New York and New Jersey delegation as sympathetic with their views.

One of the plans under consideration for proceedings was to get the delegates out of the way, take two ballots, and then recess to Friday morning, leaving Thursday night maneuvering, close counting and jockeying up of forces. No one will admit, however, of even getting discussions out of the way today.

One of the ways when the convention is ready for business, the opponents of McAdoo expect at least 400 delegates would stand to the right of his nomination.

WILSON DOESN'T OBJECT TO LEAGUE PLANK

WASHINGTON.—The league of nations plank adopted by the resolutions committee of the Democratic party is not unacceptable to President Wilson, it was indicated in administration circles Thursday. The plank calls for treaty ratification without reservations which would impair its essential integrity, but puts the party on record as not opposed to reservations that make the treaty "clearer and more specific."

Officials in touch with the president said that Wilson has maintained through the treaty fight that he is not opposed to interpretative reservations which the plank calls for as they interpret it.

"CAN W. J. BRYAN REPEAT?"

This is Big Question at Frisco Convention

SAN FRANCISCO. (By United Press.)—Can he repeat? To many delegates in the national convention this question Thursday overshadowed: Who will be the nominee?

Twenty-four years ago in very similar circumstances, Bryan, then the "boy orator of the Platte," by his eloquence so swayed the delegates to the national convention in the old Coliseum at Chicago, as to prevent the party's going on record in favor of the gold standard.

"You shall not place this crown of thorns on labor's brow; you shall not crucify mankind upon a cross of gold!" he shouted at the end of a speech of thrilling fervor.

He tilted the gold standard plank—and incidentally made himself the standard bearer of his party.

Of course, there is no thought today of Bryan in the role of nominee, but the party is much divided on the wet and dry issue in this connection as it was on the gold standard in 1896.

And there is no question but that Bryan is even more earnest in his insistence upon putting a dr. plank in the platform in 1920 than he was in his fight against the gold standard at Chicago.

He is also expected to fight on the issue against making the league of nations the paramount campaign issue, as desired by President Wilson, but his main effort is to be concentrated on the liquor question.

BANDITS DESTROY MEXICAN CARS

Americans on Board Reported Safe; Troops at Scene

WASHINGTON.—A Mexican armored train, carrying Americans, was attacked by bandits Tuesday in the state of Chihuahua, according to a report to the state department Thursday from the American consul at Chihuahua.

The train arrived at Jimenez with all Americans safe. Occupants of the rear car successfully defended themselves against the bandits until the arrival of reinforcement troops, when the train continued on its journey to Jimenez.

The water car and armored car were blown up. Immediately after the explosion, the engine was uncoupled and driven to Pochco, 60 miles east of Chihuahua, to obtain aid of government troops.

STRIKEBREAKERS MAY BE CALLED IN DAYTON STREET CAR TROUBLE BY FRIDAY

DAYTON.—The six street car companies Thursday served notice upon their 500 striking motormen and conductors that unless they report for duty by 10 a. m. Friday morning they will be regarded as having been discharged and local men will be given their jobs.

If local men refuse to take out the cars, strike breakers will be employed and brought to the city to restore service.

M'ADOO HEDGED BY COX MEN, CLAIM

Ohio's Backers See Victory After Early Balloting

MURPHY'S AID IS EXPECTED

Believe Palmer Will Weaken Within Four Votes

SAN FRANCISCO. (By United Press.)—All of the carefully planned political strategy of weeks appeared to have been shattered by overnight developments.

A combination of events, centering about the reaction from Wednesday's nominating speeches and demonstrations, has resulted in a complete realignment of forces preparatory to the balloting for the Democratic presidential nominees.

From a maze of unexpected happenings that transpired with bewildering rapidity thruout the night and far into the morning, the following stood out Thursday:

PALMER FORCES PLANKED—William McAdoo may poll the most votes on the first ballot. This was admitted by supporters of Attorney General A. Mitchell Palmer, who had led in first choice strength up to the present.

It was predicted that McAdoo would poll between 300 and 350 and Palmer about 275 on the initial vote.

The situation has been accepted with delight by the Palmerites, who welcomed the unexpected possibility of having McAdoo set the pace.

They predicted they would be able to "squeeze out" the former cabinet member within six ballots—the limit originally set by the McAdoo organization for its candidate's nomination.

McAdoo's leaders, who planned on holding back and developing their strength systematically, said their candidate's "following" had run away and that it would be practically impossible to "keep the brakes on the band wagon."

Some of the most optimistic predicted McAdoo's nomination within four ballots.

CLAIMS FOR COX—Governor James M. Cox's organization claimed to have McAdoo infinitely blocked, with not more than 500 votes as a maximum for the latter. The Ohioan's leaders looked for Palmer's disintegration within the first three or four ballots. From that point on, they expected Cox to pick up at the expense of the other general.

It was also intimated that at the proper time, it would be revealed that Charles F. Murphy, Tammany leader, is not as unfriendly to the Cox candidacy as some persons believe.

A cloud of gloom hung over the camp of Governor Edward G. Edwards Thursday. This was partially due to uncertainty over the ultimate action of the convention on the prohibition question, but mostly to the apparent conviction among the New Jersey men that the nomination already has been wrapped up and is ready for delivery to McAdoo.

One of the Edwards lieutenants even went so far as to say it's all over.

WILSON STAMPEDE MEN

A cabinet member, whose name cannot be revealed, blossomed out with a story to the effect that the balloting was certain to go to a deadlock, whereupon some one would shout "Why not nominate Wilson?"

According to this cabalistic, the convention would thus be stampeded, but after it was all over, Wilson would decline the nomination. The member of the president's official family seemed to think it would then be up to the president to come out in the open and name his successor.

The most "dark horses" strength centered about Vice-President Thomas R. Marshall. There was some conversation about Champ Clark in that role, however, some of the ever-ready information mongers spreading a tale that Palmer's followers were prepared to throw all their strength to the Missouri congressman in the event the attorney general could not win.

The majority of observers held the opinion that as the situation stood Thursday, the chances for nomination could be measured in this order: McAdoo, Cox, Davis, Gerard, Marshall.

CAR FARE INCREASED—Fares on the surface street cars here advanced from six cents, under a decision of the state public utilities commission. Fares on the elevated lines ran up to seven and a half cents, but a decision on the appeal of the elevated lines for an increase to ten cents is expected within a week.

GOV. COX APPEARS UNCONCERNED

Confident Since He Found Horse-shoe on Farm

DAYTON. (By United Press.)—Governor James M. Cox, who at his home here is watching the political drama now being enacted at San Francisco, appears unconcerned about the outcome. If he has any feelings of tenseness as the decisive hour approaches, he has successfully masked his emotions.

Altho he is one of the prominent actors in the play, yet as the time drew near for candidates at the national convention to start balloting, Governor Cox was at his downtown office, directing the work of getting out the editions of his daily newspaper. He seemed more interested in harvesting a crop of wheat on his farm near Middletown than in the planks of the Democratic platform.

He had more to say about two candlesticks which are to go into his old farm home which he is modernizing with ancient furnishings, than about the wet and dry planks. Reassuring his friends at the convention that he would be there hourly, but they are not needed since Wednesday, when he found a horse-shoe while tramping over the fields of his farm.

1,400 STEEL MEN OUT ON STRIKE

Mills At Gerard and Pittsburgh Affected, Pending Settlement

PITTSBURGH. (By Associated Press.)—Five hundred and fifty iron puddlers failed to report for work at the mills of the A. M. Byers Company and the Browns Incorporated company here Thursday. H. S. Reece, vice president of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers announced. They will remain out, pending a settlement of the wage controversy at Columbus between representatives of the union and employers.

GERARD, Ohio.—Approximately 800 iron puddlers, members of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers did not report for work Thursday at the plant of the A. M. Byers Company. The company announced that the blast furnaces would be kept running on stocks now on hand for two weeks, after which 400 bar workers will be made idle.

S. K. Hine, general manager of the plant said today he did not know why the men had quit when the scale had not expired. "We had the furnaces ready for them," he said, "but they ordered them to quit, and they did." He added that telephone negotiations with Amalgamated officials had produced no result but that he expected the trouble would be settled so that work could be resumed Tuesday. The plant is said to be the biggest puddling mill in the country.

M'ADOO IS SILENT

"Nothing Whatever to Say," Message to Inquiring Reporters

HUNTINGTON, N. Y.—Maintaining his sphinx-like silence, William G. McAdoo at his home here Thursday declined to be persuaded by newspaper men to make any comment on the activities of the Democratic convention at San Francisco, where his name has been placed in nomination for the presidency.

"Mr. McAdoo says he has nothing whatever to say" was the answer brought by the maid to the newsmen, who had besieged the McAdoo home thruout the morning, in a futile effort to interview the former secretary of the treasury.

KILLED AT CROSSING—NEWARK, Ohio.—Sam Johnson, 30, of Crooksville, is dead, as the result of injuries received when his automobile collided with an Ohio electric traction car on the national pike near Hoboken, N. J. Wednesday. Jack Rutherford, also of Crooksville, was probably fatally injured and William Johnson, brother of Sam, was seriously hurt.

WILSON BEATEN IN SKIRMISH

Modified Plank Accepted by Administration Leaders

COMMITTEE DEBATES 4 HOURS

SAN FRANCISCO. (By United Press.)—In an all night session, which ended early Thursday, the resolutions committee of the Democratic national convention, by a vote of 31 to 12, adopted a plank putting the party on record as not opposing reservations to the peace treaty which would make it clearer or more specific.

The essential part of the plank adopted, reads as follows: "We favor ratification of the Versailles treaty, without reservations that would impair its integrity, but we are not opposed to reservations that would make it clearer and more specific."

The declaration for ratification without impairing reservations was on the administration plank. The motion referring to reservations to make the treaty clearer, was offered by Senator Walsh of Massachusetts, as an amendment. There was a long and bitter struggle between the supporters of Walsh's amendment and those favoring adoption of the administration plank without change.

FOUR HOURS DEBATE

Walsh made a vigorous speech, in which he declared that no fair-minded man could object to his amendment. The committee spent four hours discussing the league plank, most of the time being devoted to debate on Walsh's amendment.

The roll call, by which the committee was put on record was on the question of adopting the amendment. After the amendment was adopted, the plank was accepted by administration leaders without further opposition.

Other amendments proposed by W. J. Bryan and Senator Pomerene of Ohio, were rejected. Pomerene's amendment, which advocated in effect, the acceptance of the League reservation if the treaty could not be ratified by any other means, Bryan presented a plank for a constitutional amendment to permit ratification of treaties in the senate by a majority vote and pledging the Democrats to ratify the Versailles treaty with whatever reservations were necessary to get a two-thirds vote in the senate.

VICTORY A SURPRISE

Walsh's victory over the administration was tremendous surprise. All indications had pointed to acceptance by the committee of President Wilson's plank on the league, which was in effect a demand for ratification without any reservations.

The action of the committee may lead to a majority report of the administration group, it was indicated. After disposing of the league plank, the resolutions committee adjourned until 10 a. m. At the time of adjournment the liquor question and the Irish plank had not been disposed of.

The "strong labor" plank reported by a sub-committee which drafted the outlines of the platform was adopted without any opposition. Many other planks were accepted, committee members said.

Bryan's fight for a dry plank will reach its climax when the committee meets again. Committee members said that the liquor fight and the Irish question might delay completion of the platform until late Thursday.

TWO MEN KILLED WHEN 600 QUARTS NITRO-GLYCERINE EXPLODES IN KENTUCKY

BEATTYSVILLE, Ky.—Two men were blown to atoms when 600 quarts of nitro-glycerine which they were hauling from Toronto to Beattysville exploded. It is believed that the explosion was caused by the wagon dropping into a hole in the road. The men were Henry Alexander and George Hughes, teamsters employed by the Cumberland Traction Company.

Four horses and two mules which were hitched to the wagon also were killed.

CONVENTION TIME

The Democratic convention at San Francisco opens on Wednesday, which is two hours behind Central time, which is used in Lima and vicinity. The convention, opened today at 11:30 Western time, which is 1:30 Central time.

Platform As Drawn by Democratic Sub-Committee Calls for Ratification of Suffrage

Puts Irish Question Up to Nation League—World Covenant Follows the Virginia Plan

SAN FRANCISCO. (By Associated Press.)—The Democratic platform as drafted by the sub-committee of nine and submitted to the full committee declared for ratification of the peace treaty as a requisite to preserve the honor and integrity of the nation; suggests that the Irish question can be brought legitimately before the league of nations for settlement, and is silent on the subject of prohibition.

It advocates collective bargaining for farmers, opposes compulsory arbitration of labor disputes; declares for recognition of the new Mexican government, when it has established order, and calls on the legislators of Tennessee, Florida and North Carolina to ratify the suffrage amendment. In many respects the platform follows that adopted by the Virginia Democrats and publicly approved by President Wilson. The league of nations plank, in particular was taken virtually as a whole from the Virginia platform, tho in other respects, there have been modifications and many new subjects have been added.

William J. Bryan's prohibition plank, around which Thursday's fight in the platform committee is centering, reads as follows:

"We heartily congratulate the Democratic party on its splendid leadership in the submission and ratification of the prohibition amendment to the federal constitution and we pledge the party to the effective enforcement of the Volstead law, honestly and in good faith, without any increase in the alcoholic content of perverting beverages and without weakening of any other of its provisions."

A summary of the sub-committee's draft follows:

COX DECLARED NATION'S SAVER

Judge Johnson Presents Ohio's Governor, Great In War and Peace, Three-Time Winner, to Democrats as Presidential Nominee

SAN FRANCISCO. —(United Press.)—With Governor Cox as your candidate, Ohio is Democratic, and with Ohio Democratic, victory is yours," James G. Johnson, Judge of the Ohio Supreme Court, told delegates to the Democratic national convention, placing Ohio's three-time Governor in nomination for President of the United States.

Naming Ohio as the pivotal state in the coming campaign, Judge Johnson—not a delegate himself, but presented to the convention by the Ohio delegation—said in no state would the issues of the campaign be felt more deeply than in Ohio, home also of Senator Warren G. Harding, Republican nominee.

Johnson outlined the record of Cox in Ohio, praised his war work and his civil administration in Ohio. "If he was masterful and efficient in civil administration, he was superb as the leader of the people in preparing for and prosecuting war," said Judge Johnson.

"Confident that close examination by a great, free and intelligent people will disclose that our Governor is a splendid example of what America can do, and that he meets the needs of the hour, the Democracy of Ohio, with entire unanimity, brings to the Democracy of the nation this great practical and successful leader and statesman."

"Ohio nominates for President of this country, James M. Cox."

FROM MIGHTY STATE

Judge Johnson's speech follows: "I speak for a mighty state. The election this year will fix the status of America for a generation. Not only will it decide whether we shall take our rightful place at the very head of the nations in a united effort for civilization, or shall lapse into sullen ostracism in the face of opportunities for service to humanity which no people ever had; but it will also decide whether the domestic progress and vast productive energies of this continent shall be turned back into reactionary channels after a period of splendid achievement in Democratic administration."

"Before November comes, the people of every state will be profoundly touched with the vast importance of this issue, but in no state more deeply than in Ohio."

"We, in Ohio, feel that we are a cosmopolitan people in a large and unusual sense. Citizens of all nations are drawn to us from every race and every clime. We feel the heartbeats, the triumphs and the sufferings of all the world."

"Ohio was the first state that was admitted to the Union from the great Northwest Territory, which was presented as a free gift to the nation by the splendid generosity of Virginia, under the lead of her immortal son, Thomas Jefferson."

"In the early days the Cavaliers of the South, the Puritans of New England, the Holland Dutch of New York, the Pennsylvania Germans and the Maryland Irish all sent pioneers to Ohio. These, with the sturdy immigrants from the old country, met upon our soil, mingled their blood and began the construction of a great commonwealth. All stood equal and under the inspiration of the Revolution, and the pure and benign influences of nature they began in Ohio, and extended thence to the Northwest an era of progress and prosperity not seen before among men."

WORLD WAR DUTY

"When this country was forced into the great world war, the people common with their fellow countrymen in all of the states, were thrilled by the call of a great man who sits in the seat of Washington and Lincoln, and who with superb spirit and matchless phrase interpreted the highest aspirations and invincible purpose of the free peoples of the earth. If envy, hatred and passion shall deprive him of his just recognition now, and deprive his country and humanity of the benefits of his vast service in their behalf, succeeding generations will pay increasing devotion to his honor. The mighty appeal he made to the resilient forces of civilization will place him among the colossal figures in the history of mankind."

"As we enter the great contest now impending, our opponents fear every flame of discontent. They pool every discordant element in order to carry the election. Unmindful and regardless of the effect on the welfare of the Republic and on the orderly processes of society, they arouse bitter prejudices and set in motion forces which it is easy to see may become absolutely uncontrollable. They do not hesitate to cast a cloud on the glory won for our country by the millions of our boys who grandly carried the flag to the battlefields of Europe and with unconquerable spirit placed it at the very front of the columns of civilization. All the world felt that democracy, freedom and friendship had a new meaning in the earth."

"The American people must now decide whether that proud position which our soldiers and our people won shall be abandoned or whether we shall show ourselves worthy of the inheritance we have enjoyed."

"The Democratic party needs a candidate who holds in his heart the memory of the glorious record of the incomparable American boy who looks forward with courage and capacity to grasp the opportunities and to meet the difficulties and dangers yet to come. He must know the beginnings and the reasons for the American Republic. He must know and feel its spirit; and the spirit of the wise men who founded it, who made its Declaration and its Constitution, and set it forth on its grand mission. He must know that universal education is the cornerstone of the Republic, and that the best guarantee of its continuance is that it rests in the intelligent affections of the people; that Americanization is not an idle ceremony that it is not a thing to be gained in a day or a year, but that it is the result of the slow process of education and of the influence of association and contact with those who have enjoyed and appreciate what enlightened liberty is. He must know that America cannot hold herself away from the rest of the world, that science and invention and genius have removed all barriers on land ped to his rightful place as the leader in organizing our contribution to the man power of the army, the great productive energies of our mines, our factories and our farms. Backed by the best men and best women, without regard to party, he disclosed a capacity for leadership in that sacred cause which placed him at the very front among the great American war governors."

"Courageous himself, he inspired the timid with courage. In every county and in all the great centres of industry his voice was heard arousing and directing the patriotism of the citizens, and in every camp he threw his full vigor in providing for the welfare and encouragement of the boys upon whom our future was to depend. If he was masterful and efficient in civil administration, he was superb as the leader of the people in preparing for and prosecuting war."

"The expenses of his campaign are met from the small and voluntary contributions of those who know him best. He is bound by no express or implied obligation to any class or interest."

THREE TIMES WINNER

"For a half century Ohio was normally Republican, but three times this man has been elected Governor of the Buckeye State. The last time he was the only man on the Democratic ticket who was elected, and he is stronger now. I doubt if there are many instances in which a chief executive has made the sure and steady advance in the confidence and esteem and ripened judgment of his fellow-citizens of all classes that this man has made in Ohio. His real genius for executive duty, and his record of accomplishment has increased his popularity and strength far beyond the power of our opponents to overcome, however huge the campaign fund may be."

COX MEANS VICTORY

"With him as your candidate, Ohio is Democratic, and with Ohio Democratic, victory is yours."

"Every four years Americans drink anew at the fountains of freedom and enthusiasm. It is hard to overstate the enormous educational value of a presidential election to our people. The youth of the land receives instruction that fixes its faith in the Republic upon sure foundations, and it receives widespread education on public questions. It is one of the finest things in our national life. To every lover of freedom it is inspiring."

"What a grand thing it is to witness the scenes of the national conventions of the two great parties of our country. In no other country, since men began to consult together, could such a thing be seen as we see every four years. But not in the exciting scenes of these conventions is the final choice to be made. In the quiet time between now and the election, in the summer and autumn the records of the parties and the candidates will pass in review before the American people, in the homes, in the hamlets, in the great centers of commerce and industry, before the humblest and the highest; and when the golden glories of autumn have come, the mature judgment of the people will be expressed."

"They know enough to know that the road to the re-establishment of durable peace and progress is arduous. They know that the recuperative spirit that was placed by the Creator in every race, in every time, will reassert itself and that in the new day that will come out of the suffering and lessons of the great struggle which we have passed, and the new social fabric that has been woven by an unseen, omnipotent power, America must take her proper place; that while maintaining untarnished and untouched the grand institutions of freedom prepared for us by the forefathers, these institutions must be used as the forefathers themselves declared, for the benefit of humanity."

"Confident that this close examination by a great free and intelligent people will disclose that our Governor is a splendid example of what America can do, and that he meets the needs of the hour, the Democracy of Ohio, with entire unanimity, brings to the Democracy of the nation this great practical and successful leader and statesman."

"Ohio nominates for President of this country James M. Cox."

"The knowledge of the value of opposition. His service and earnest work in Congress and on its great Committee on Appropriations gave him a view of the practical operation of government and of its countless activities. He saw the value and need of co-operation, and his natural aptness to work with others was constantly felt by his colleagues. No man, friend or foe, has ever said that he saw the fence or dodged in times of dispute between conflicting interests. All saw and admired the resolute stand he took for the impartial enforcement of the law. He demanded of every subordinate executive officer in every county and in every municipality the same unquestioning observance of equal and exact justice. His spirit was so high and his sense of fairness so even and manifest that no soldier was ever needed to march between capital and labor."

"Recognizing the right of every man to his opinion on every proposed public measure, after the discussion was over and the judgment of the people had been written into the law of the state, he has, with the same cool and deliberate hand, enforced that law. No sincere, well-informed citizen of Ohio has denied that proposition. This has been, and will be, his position to the end."

"When our country entered the war, men and women of every state were lifted out of the ordinary channels. The only rivalry was in the glorious rivalry of service. The patriotic fervor shown by men of all parties of every origin and of every creed, was a magnificent exhibition of the militant strength of a great composite people. The Democratic Federal Reserve system made it possible to mobilize quickly and effectively the inexhaustible resources of a continent. And Ohio, proud of the work that was being done by every other state, joined in the effort to demonstrate that America should meet the supreme test."

"Our Governor, with invincible enthusiasm and untiring energy, stepped

THINKS PALMER IS MAN OF HOUR

Bigelow Presents His Name For Presidency

SAYS TIME DEMANDS HIM

Urges His Nomination By Democratic Convention

SAN FRANCISCO—The name of Attorney-General A. Mitchell Palmer of Pennsylvania was placed before the Democratic national convention here as a candidate for the nomination for the Presidency. How John H. Bigelow of Harrison, Pa., offering Palmer's name, said in part:

Mr. Chairman and my fellow delegates: The decisions of this convention are fraught with momentous consequences, not only to the party but to the country as well. The policies which you here proclaim and the tenets which you here announce will spell the future of the nation. The hopes and aspirations of the future years, the destinies of the future, are in your hands. The destiny of the country depends on you in this critical hour, and while we here deliberate let us realize that from this Golden Gate, generations yet unborn look down upon you.

Your platform must respond with the true principles of the party. It must ring with the spirit of Democracy. But your promises will be vain and your pledges without avail unless your leader shall be an inspiration in himself. He must be not only the exponent of your party but more than that, for the times are tense with great demands. The inevitable heritages of the war are ours. From every quarter of the globe they are thrust upon us. A rising disaffection for government surrounds us. A spirit of discontent pervades us. Industrial unrest stalks about us. The army of anarchy and the hosts of evil are arrayed against us. Their banners are raised against every agency of the government and the firm foundation laid by the founders of the country are threatened.

Mr. Chairman, this is no idle statement—a myth of imagination—no chimera of fancy. It is written in the history of the day.

Mr. Chairman, the hosts that we sent abroad in the years of our great conflict, performed their prodigious valor and wrought their noble conquests to the eternal glory of the country. By their valor and by their prowess the mightiest agency of the world's Democracy was subdued. The militant spirits brooding over the bloody battlefields of France and Flanders were conquered. But the menaces to free governments were not banished. They will rear the hydrahead of anarchy and revolution. Some gather in the silence of the night within the gates of secrecy. Others take up the torch of the art of speech and spread their pernicious doctrines. They prey upon ignorance and long established hatred of every form of government. The danger is not distant, the fears are not fancy. They are leaving things and always pregnant with disaster. Therefore your candidate must be more than the mere mouthpiece of your policies. He must be the embodiment of your freedom and the exemplar of your liberties. He must be the intrepid defender of your institutions, a courageous crusader in the cause of law and order. Above all, he must be the ardent advocate of Americanism, and the Democrat of Pennsylvania has commanded me to present to you his candidacy.

In the exciting time through which we have passed in recent years he has shown all of the qualities of leadership.

In Pennsylvania when a powerful political organization under the leadership of the present high priest of the Republican party—the invisible power that dominated the recent convention at Chicago—had tempted even the leaders of our own party to betray their interests, it was he that entered into the conflict and rescued Democracy from her faithless leaders and from her shame. It was he that fearlessly exposed the crimson record of Republican corruption and regenerated his party so that now it may hold high its head in pursuit of those lofty ideals and pure purposes that are the pride of the nation's Democracy.

In the halls of the Congress of the nation in 1909 and 1911, when the regime of autocracy threatened to crush the genius of Democratic government it was he that stood steadfast with that magnificent array of our leaders that routed the old order of absolutism, abolished Censorship and opened the doors for the opportunities that the ensuing years showered upon our party.

When finally the people of the nation entrusted the character of power to Democracy and placed her representatives in charge of our legislative halls it was he that stood upon the floor of Congress and rendered valiant service alongside of Clark and Underwood in the great constructive work that marked the initial steps of Democracy's reascendence.

When less than four years ago the nation resorted to arms to vindicate her sovereignty to repel and recent repeated insults to her authority, it was he that by fearless administration of his trust as custodian and directed the power against the foe from whom it was taken.

No task assigned to layman or of fiction has ever been performed in the history of this government, with such measure of success that has attended his administration as Alien Property Custodian. Not only from his friends within the party but from press and forum there has gone that commendation that stamps him as an executive and administrator. Upon his magnificent achievements in the discharge of those duties could I safely rest his appeal and his candidacy.

When during the war and succeeding it, the insidious evils of anarchy and her lawless litter arose, it was he that stood valiantly against the protests of parlor bolsheviks, against the thrusts of venal pen and slanderous tongue, and deported and imprisoned the defamers of the nation—aye even at the threat of the terrorist's bombs.

Mr. Chairman, no party could surlive today that did not write into its platform the word Americanism. That power which has agitated monarchies, crumbled thrones and brought new formations into being will be the shibboleth of every political party. It will be seized upon by every demagogue and mountebank that appeals for suffrage to our people. Every party will claim it—every candidate will profess it—also every scoundrel who steals the lives of his own people the devil in. But the people care not for their professions or pretensions, they judge them by their performance. Tried in the crucible of danger and menaced by our peril, the Attorney-General of the United States has not merely professed but he has proved, in true Americanism, his loyalty for his nation and her annals for his proof. Their stand without impeachment—mute eloquent and convincing. While his detractors were slandering him with malice and ill-will, there he stood at the capital of the nation bravely facing his enemies in defense of the ashes of our Fathers and the temples of their gods. While the violent voice of agitation was being raised against him for restraining feudal forces, from passing the hand of industry these law-unmoved by the clamor and tumult that threatened against him all form of reprisal. When more dangerous and a-sailed themselves—the assassin the marchant and the communist—then he stood, principled in the armor of a Vulcan striking with all the might and majesty of the nation confounding the columns of sedition and scattering the settled ranks of sed.

Behind him I see a solid phalanx of true Americanism that knows no divided allegiance. I see the humble citizens who worship their God, their country and their neighbor. I see the worthy sons of those noble sires that sleep in a hundred battlefields followed by their blood. I see the grim determination that provides them as they resolve that this nation shall not perish. I see them following a shining helmet emblazoned with the light of liberty and adorned by the onflame of right. New Navarre

ALLEN-CO FARMERS BENEFIT BY WOOL GROWERS PLAN OF GRADING AND SALES

The farmers are realizing this year more than ever before that the Ohio Wool Growers Association is a valuable institution, according to Co-Farm Agent Van Natta. At the close of the war Great Britain had a great excess of wool so not long ago she placed over 2,000,000 lbs of wool on the American market.

This combined with the labor troubles and the closing of several of the textile factories in the east has completely closed the wool market so that it may be some time before the market is again opened. The system the Allen-Co farmers now employ is to send their wool to Columbus where it is graded and put away until the market opens. In this way the farmers get the price according to what their wool is worth while formerly some would sell a high grade of wool the same as an inferior grade.

The undersigned studios will be closed from July 4 to 11, attending Ohio-Mich-Ind Photographers convention.

MAYOR BURKHARDT
MAY MISS AIR TRIP
TO CLEVELAND, JULY 3

Mayor Burkhardt may not fly to Cleveland. A telegram from that city is to the effect that due to failure to obtain co-operation of the Manufacturers' Aircraft Association the aviation clubs of Ohio may not have enough planes to carry out the original Mayor's day plans Saturday.

The mayor said he will probably not go to the convention of the associated aviation clubs unless a plane calls for him as planned.

Appetite and Health

Loss of appetite is a sure sign of ill-health.

Those who take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People as a tonic invariably say that their improvement began with a noticeable increase in the appetite. When you are sick and your vitality is low your appetite fails. Nothing tastes good. You take no pleasure in your meals. Under such circumstances good digestion is impossible.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills tone up the entire system, the blood is enriched and good red blood is essential to normal digestion. The glands that secrete the digestive fluids are strengthened, not merely stimulated, and you once more enjoy a good appetite. Looking forward pleasantly to meal-time is the first sign of returning health, strength and vitality.

What to eat then becomes a problem and it is solved by the diet book that the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y., will send you on request. It gives the relative digestibility of different foods, gives the proper diet in various diseases and is a handy book to have.

The price of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is six cents per box. Your own druggist sells them or they will be sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of price.

JUDITH of BLUE LAKE RANCH

By JACKSON GREGORY

"Pollock is going to see what is the matter," she announced excitedly. "Wheat Mrs. Langworthy started at her and then indicated facially her supreme disgust. The major suggested taking something, the occasion so plainly demanding it. Hampton passed swiftly thru the courtyard. He saw the light of the bunk-house gleaming brightly. On his way down the knoll he came upon Tommy Burkitt.

"Is it Mr. Hampton?" asked Tommy, coming close in the darkness to peer at him.

"Yes. What is it? Who are you?" I'm Burkitt, Tommy Burkitt, you know—Bud Lee's helper. I am afraid something has happened. Lee hasn't come in yet; they tried to pick him on once already, you know.

"Neither has Miss Sanford come in," said Hampton quickly, "seems here at last a fear that was follow to his own." They rode toward the Upper End. You know the way, Burkitt.

He moved on toward the corral; Burkitt turned and came with him. "Sure I know the trail," muttered Tommy. "You're going to see what's wrong with 'em?" Miss Judy, too, My God!

"Bring out a couple of horses," Hampton commanded crisply. "We've lots time enough already." "I'll go tell Carson and the boys—"

"I have already told Carson. He says it's all nonsense. Leave him alone."

Tommy, boy that he was, asked no further questions, but ran ahead and brought out two horses. In a twinkling he had saddled them, and the two rides, each with a rifle across his arm, were hurrying over the mountain trail.

In the blackness which lay along the upper river Hampton gave his horse a free rein and let it follow at Tommy's heels. The roar of the rushing water, the pounding of shod hoofs, the whining creak of saddle-leather were the only sounds coming to them out of the night. When finally, they drew rein under the cliffs at the lake's edge all was silent save for the faint distant booming of the river below them.

"Now which way?" whispered Hampton, his voice eloquent of suppressed excitement and eagerness.

Tommy was shaking his head in uncertainty when suddenly from above there came to them the sharp report of a rifle. Then, like a bundle of firecrackers, a volley of half a dozen staccato shots.

"Listen to that, Burkitt, muttered Hampton. They're at it now—we're on time—"

Tommy slipped from the saddle wordlessly, came to Hampton's side and tugged gently at his leg, whispering for him to get down. Leaving their horses there, they slipped into the utter darkness of the narrow chasm in the rocks which gave access to the plateau above.

"Now," cautioned Tommy fearfully, as they came to the top, "keep close to me if you don't want to take a header about a thousand feet. Look!" He nudged Hampton and pointed. "There are two horses across yonder; Bud's and Miss Judy's, most likely."

Hampton did not see them. Did not seek to see them. Something new, vital, big, had swept suddenly into his life. He was at grips first-hand with unmasked, pulsing forces. A tremor went through him and he was not ashamed of it, for it was not the quaking of fear, but the thrill in the blood of a man who, plucked from a round of social artificialities, finds himself with the smell of burnt powder in his nostrils and who feels a swift eagerness for what may lie just yonder waiting for him.

"They're at it now!" he whispered to Burkitt. Men—yes, and a girl—were shooting, not at just wooden and paper targets, but at other men! At men who shot back, and shot to kill.

"Listen," said Burkitt. "Somebody's in the old cabin; somebody's outside. Which is which? We got to be awful careful."

They began a slow, cautious approach, slipping from bush to bush, from tree to tree, standing motionless now and then to frown into the folds of the night's curtains. Abruptly the firing ceased. They made out vaguely the two forms of the attackers, having located them a moment ago by the spurting flames from their guns. Then, "Got enough in there?" came the snarling voice of Quininn. "If you haven't, I'm going to burn you out an' be damned to you!"

He got an answer he little expected. For Hampton, running out into the open, now that he knew that Bud and Judith must be in the cabin, was firing as he came. Burkitt's rifle spoke with his.

"Run for it, Shorty!" yelled Quininn. "You know where. We're up against the Blue Lake boys."

"Bud!" shouted Tommy. "Oh, Bud!"

"In the cabin," came Bud's ringing answer. "Give 'em hell, Tommy! Coming!"

With his words came the sound of the door snapping back against the wall, the reports of Tommy's rifle and Hampton's pumping hot lead after two racing forms.

"They'll get away!" shouted Hampton, a sudden red rage upon him. "Curse it! It's too dark!"

Then Tommy gave over shooting and yelled to Lee to hold his fire. For instead of two there were three flying forms, three fast-racing, blurring, shadowy shapes merging with the night. Pollock Hampton, his rifle clubbed in his hand, was running with a college sprinter's speed after Quininn and Shorty calling breathlessly.

"Look out, they'll get away!" Once Quininn stopped to shoot back. The hussling lead went wide of the pursuer and he gave over firing and settled down to good, hard running, disappearing from Hampton's staring eyes. But Shorty was still to be seen, running heavily.

"Don't shoot, Bud!" cried Tommy again, two figures ran out of the cabin. "Hampton's out there—the crazy fool!"

"Hampton, come back!" shouted Lee, running after him. But Hampton was gathering on the heavy-set Shorty and had no thought of coming back. Nor a thought of anything in all the wide world just then but overtaking the flying figure in front of him. Shorty stumbled over a fallen log and rose, cursing and calling:

"Christ! Lend a hand." That little chance of an uprooted tree saved Hampton's life that night. Shorty, falling, had dropped his gun and hurt his knee. For a moment he groped wildly for the lost rifle, then ran on without it. Hampton cleared the log, and with a yell rather befitting a victorious savage than the young man whom Mrs. Langworthy hoped to call her son, threw his long arms about Shorty's neck.

"I got him!" shouted Hampton. Shorty drove a big brutal fist smashing into his captor's face. But Hampton merely lowered his head.

YOU can hardly believe it, of course, but every word in this ad is absolutely true. Every statement is backed up by the goods.

As one well-meaning customer put it to us: "If you can do this now, why didn't you do it long ago?" We can't do it now. But we are doing it because we have banded together with other leading public-spirited merchants to break high prices "if it takes all summer" and costs us thousands of dollars to do it.

We're doing more than our share in this movement. We have deliberately taken a gigantic stock of our finest oxfords, worth up to $9.00 a pair, and marked them down to the talk-of-the-town prices of $4.48 and $5.98 per pair.

They are not odds or ends, or "samples," or a "purchase" or broken sizes—but all brand new stock NEWARK shoes, in all sizes and in such popular leathers as Mahogany Cordo, Vic Kid, Gun Metal and Russet. Sale starts Friday morning at 7.30 sharp for the benefit of those who want to buy before going to work.

SUN BREAKS UP BREAD RIOT

Hungry Crowds Become Good Humored Under Rays

MADRID. — The sun prevented what threatened to be a serious outbreak in Madrid during the recent bakers' strike. The first two days of the bread scarcity were dull and threatening and the hungry poor were so affected by the lowering skies and the lack of food that they paraded the streets in groups uttering shouts and menacing storekeepers who kept their establishments open.

On the third day the sun shone and although still hungry and compelled to wait indefinite hours for the loaves to be doled out, the people did so patiently and even cheerily.

All kinds of laws and police regulations were broken by the men, women and children forming the almost endless bread-lines, but the authorities took a lenient view of what occurred.

When an old man brought a camp bedstead, set it up on the sidewalk and stretched himself on it, a policeman arrested him and led him to the station house with his bed. The police captain first looked grave, then began to laugh when the offender explained he knew he might have to wait anything from twelve to twenty hours for his bread and had merely provided against fatigue. He was released and returned to his place in the line with his bed amid the applause of the crowd.

Another group hired a barrel organ whose owner played popular melodies while the people waiting with growing appetites and hollow stomachs danced merrily. On the Calle de la Magdalena a cobbler arrived carrying a stool, his tools and a pair of shoes, which he was able to sole and heel before his turn came to obtain a loaf.

Similar scenes were enacted day after day amid general hilarity until the municipal authorities decided to break up the big bread-lines by distributing loaves from a larger number of centers. The danger was then over.

Vacation Novelties are Tempting

For the summer girl who is planning her vacation, and has a little spare money with which to purchase a few luxuries, there are many new novelties to choose from in the local stores. Small purses of striped silk, mounted in a tiny, edging frame of gold are being shown. They come in different shapes and sizes, and can be used for cards and change, or even for cigarettes provided she wants to be ultra "faddish."

As for the new corsage flower, there are many to select from, of either velvet, silk, or plainer materials. Some of the silk corsages have ostrich feather flags added to give them charm. Others still are of gauze, in silver, gold and various colors.

G. O. P. SENSATIONAL RACE IN OHIO IS UNCHANGED

COLUMBUS. — Unless there is a sudden change in attitude of present candidates for Republican nomination for United States senator, there will be five entrants to "start" in that race at the August primary. Conferences among state leaders have failed to pull either Walter F. Brown or Frank B. Willis from the race. Rumors have had each one "pulling out" several times. However, both issued statements Wednesday night, declaring they are as much "in" as ever.

OUR MILK SUPPLY

WASHINGTON. — Ninety billion pounds of milk—enough to give each person in the United States two and a half pints a day—was produced in 1919, the Department of Agriculture announced today.

On the basis of 1919 cash prices the milk had a value to the producers of $2,000,000,000.

Manufacturers of dairy products used approximately 45,500,000,000 pounds of the milk produced and the remainder was used in American households.

LIMA'S CARGO OF ALUM ASTRAY

Badly Needed at Waterworks; State Aid Offered

Among things to worry about, the latest one for Service Director Elmer McClain is a car of Alum ordered from Marcus Hook, Pa., about six weeks ago.

The service director said the car was started originally via Columbus but was sent back to Mansfield. From Mansfield it was sent to Toledo, where it is now reported to be, with the intention of shipping it to Lima over the D. T. and I. Now, McClain says, the intention is to return it to Carruthers and eventually to Lima via Bucyrus.

In the meantime the state health department is attempting to aid the city in obtaining a car of alum direct from Columbus before July 7, on which date the supply on hand at the water works will run out. This would mean that they would have to practically suspend operations as the water contains too much sediment for filtration until it has been treated with alum, according to McClain.

BOSTON. — James Hobco, Clifton, N. J., deserter from navy confessed to setting fire to five hotels in last week here, according to police statement.

Kodaking Is Popular Despite Prices

Kodaking is one pleasure that hasn't been affected much this summer by the general trend of high prices.

According to local camera dealers, the amateur photographer pays only five cents more on a film than was charged in 1912, eight years ago. Developing paper has advanced but one or two cents in the past five years. Cameras have been affected most by the war tax, like everything else in the non-essential or pleasure line.

YOU MAY NEED THE MONEY

THERE is a short story in last week's issue of that splendid weekly magazine, The Saturday Evening Post, which every man and wife in Lima under forty years old should read; should read first alone, then read together.

It is the story of the star salesman invited into the firm at 45 years old, but unable to borrow the sum of $3,000 to take his share of the stock. It is an old story, the story of 99 per cent of the people of America. The lesson should be learned by married couples who are just turning into the thirties, the ideal age of accumulation.

Every husband owes his family a good living, but he does not owe his family more than his pay-envelope can produce. Financiers declare the eternal law of supply and demand governs in war or peace and is governing now in the prices of commodities. It is equally true that the law of Thrift always governs; that the man who cannot save $2 a week on his salary of $20 a week, will never save $50 a year on a salary of $5,000.

This is the first day of the second half of the year. Balance your books and face the figures. Unless you have savings in some bank, cash at your demand, this six months' period has been a failure for you. Money which has gone into the plant, such as paint on the house, rugs, furniture, is an investment 'tis true; but it is not a cash dividend representing actual profit. Every man of thirty must deposit ten percent on his earnings if he is to be in a position to take advantage of the opportunities which will be presented when he reaches forty.

IDLE MEN

WITHOUT meaning to find fault with anyone, for it really is none of our business, the number of idle men one encounters in a day is simply appalling. It seems as if hardly anyone is at work if one makes a survey of the various places of amusement about the city.

One may find the picture houses full of men at almost every performance, afternoons as well as evenings. The golf courses are occupied; the various clubs enjoy big attendances at almost any time of the day; the streets are filled with men as well as women. This condition does not exist here only, for at any country stop where a train halts one may see the customary large number of persons about the platform busy doing nothing.

Of course many of the people seen on the streets are employed. Some of them work at night and have some leisure during the day. Others are attending to their business when seen passing along the streets, but it seems that only a small percentage of the human race is employed. If there is a piece of unusual work going on about the city there are always more persons watching it than are doing it.

We cannot help calling attention to this condition since it is work that we need now—work to the full capacity of every individual in order that we may get back on a normal basis.

MISS LIMA: "If what we have heard a large number of prominent Republicans say may be taken as general, the managers will not have much trouble in limiting the contributions to the Harding campaign to $1,000 as they have planned."

SUMMER JUST STARTING

MERCHANTS of Lima are slashing all idea of profits and putting spring and summer merchandise on the bargain counter. It has been a backward season and hundreds of Lima people have made few mid-summer purchases. Here is their opportunity to buy what they can wear late into November at cost and under cost prices.

Your low-cut shoes purchased now will carry you over next spring into the period when mid-summer sales start again. It is the best time in the year to purchase low-cuts. The same is true of wearables, summer weaves will be in vogue and needed for at least three months to come; purchased now they will not be worn out but will be ready to put on next spring.

You often hear of the extravagance of the rich, but the rich watch their shopping opportunities. You will find the most well to do people crowding the shoe and suit houses these days; that is why they are well to do. They buy when buying is good.

There is no intention of asking the people of Lima to buy something they don't need. That practice is extravagance multiplied. But you and all the kiddies need shoes and dresses and suits and caps and light underwear and linens for the table and draperies for the house. You may not be just down to rock bottom, but the bottom is approaching. Buy now at low prices; two or three pairs of shoes are none too many and alternated will wear longer and look better than one pair continuously worn and replaced at the same amount of money. Glance over the advertising columns tonight; see what you NEED, not what you WANT.

WRITING LETTERS

MANY of us are too lax in the matter of writing letters to our friends, we find, sometimes after we have practically lost one or more of the best friends we ever had after being separated from them. Many take a pleasure in writing letters, but it is too often regarded as a drudgery and put off and put off until it becomes a habit for us not to write.

This really is nothing but selfishness. Letter writing is one of the chief mediums for spreading joy and happiness and when one fails to do this he is becoming selfish and is living for himself alone. Everyone is pleased to get a cheery letter from a friend in a distant city for it is often thru letters alone that we retain our connections with the past, with the earlier life which usually is a pleasant remembrance.

The other day we saw a young woman step into a street car with a letter. She appeared anxious to read it and lost no time in opening the envelope after securing her seat. She read it hurriedly and once we saw a pleasant smile spread over her countenance. The writer of that letter had succeeded in transmitting something thru the mails that had brought forth a smile and if nothing else was accomplished in the letter, much good was done for smiles today are worth millions.

It is a poor habit to neglect correspondence. Everyone should make an effort to keep up their end of the game for we all must have friends and one of the surest ways to become estranged from them is to neglect to write to them.

The European woman who won the championship as the homeliest of her sex there is coming to New York. She certainly will be conspicuous here.

How quiet it is around here since the chattering Colonel House, left for Europe.

MARCEL'S SEANCE

A man and a woman were playing the ouija board. Both were over fifty years old, and they had known each other for many, many years. She was a widow and he was a widower.

"Ask her to marry you, John," came a message from his former wife.

"If he does accept him, Mildred," came a message from her former husband.

Now, these two have since been married; but what I want to know is what are the other two doing in snookland? —Marcel Steinbrugge

WHAT THE STARS PREDICT

The morning of this day is fortunate, but in the evening the stars are unfriendly.

The planetary influence makes for dissatisfaction and discontent and a calm, just frame of mind, should be cultivated.

Disappointments for military men are foreshadowed.

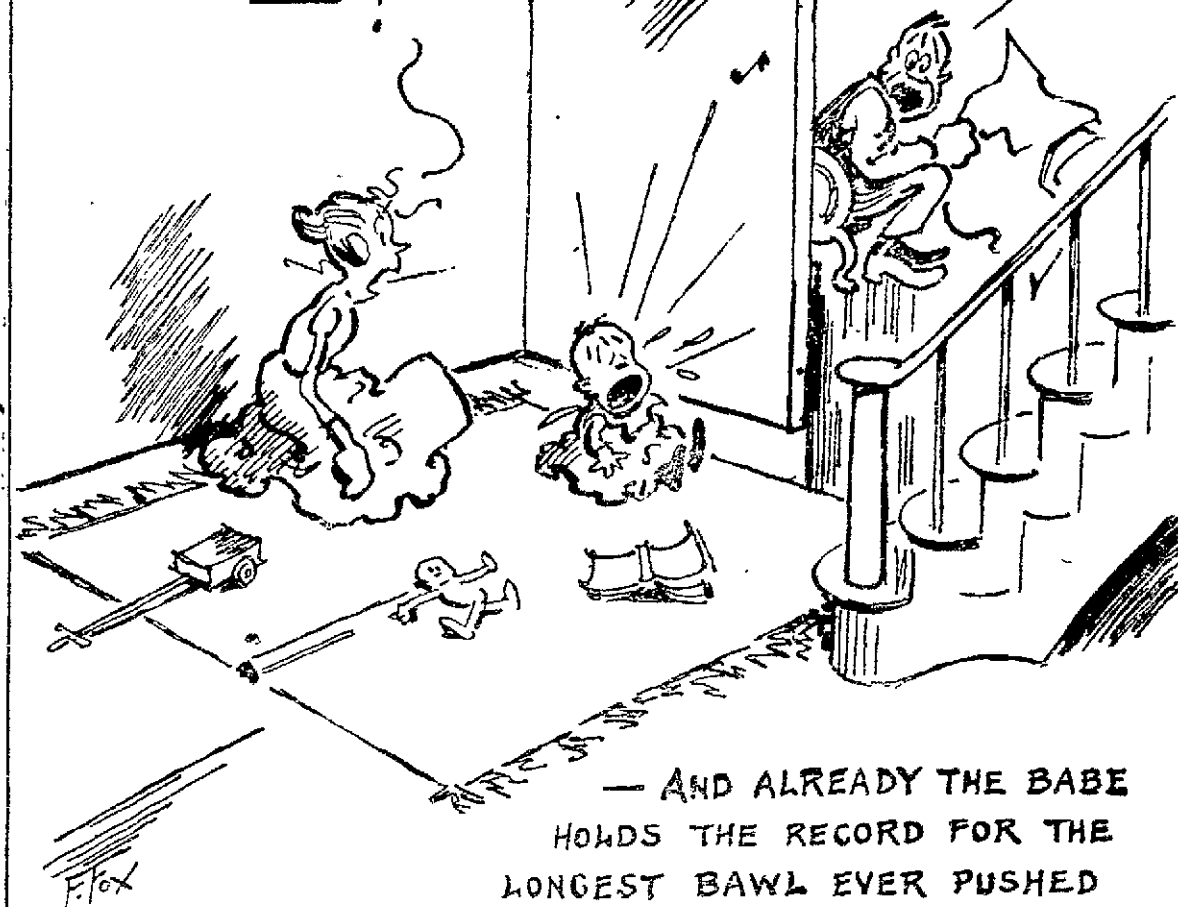

It is not a lucky day for political ambitions, since there is likely to be much treachery among supporters. The stars warn against an increase in plots and intrigues during the summer.

Persons whose birthday this is should exercise great care in business matters.

Children born today will be active and almost too fond of pleasure. (Copyright, 1920.)

HEALTH HINTS FOR TODAY

BY WILLIAM BRIDY, M. D.
THE CONTROL OF DIARRHEA

Diseases of which diarrhea is the prominent symptom are the chief cause of the excessively high death rate among babies and most of these diarrheal diseases are preventable.

Diarrhea is of three types. (1) From simple mechanical irritation of the bowel by such things as raw fruit, which should never be fed to a child under four years, grape skins, cucumbers, peanuts and the like. Parents and ignorant or irresponsible guardians are to blame for these mistakes. (2) Diarrhea from excessive fermentation in the bowel, attributable either to an excessive quantity of sugar (even starch as in some alleged infant food) in the diet, or to the introduction with the milk of an excessive number of bacteria due to uncleanliness in the handling or marketing of the milk or to lack of proper refrigeration of the milk before it is fed to the baby. (3) Too much sugar is present, as in condensed milk feeding and other cloying, if fattening, canned substitutes for a child's birthright, of course some of the sugar remains undigested and passes on into the large intestine where it undergoes fermentation, with the production of irritating acids and diarrhea. (3) Diarrhea caused by infection of the wall of the intestine with some specific germ such as the dysentery bacillus, the gas bacillus or the streptococcus—and in this type the distinguished sign is the presence of blood or pus or bits in the bowel discharges.

Mechanical Diarrhea. Don't "try" knickknacks on the baby. Don't offer the baby tastes or samples of things you know are not in his daily ration. Treatment consists of limiting the child's diet to barley water for twelve hours, giving plenty of water, keeping the child at rest in bed, administering a single dose of castor oil, and calling the doctor if the trouble persists more than twelve hours.

Fermentative Diarrhea. Don't let Tom, Dick and Harry supervise the choice of the baby's diet. If the baby is worth keeping he is worth feeding intelligently. Merely because some substitute for fresh milk properly modified, seems to "agree" for the time being is a darn poor excuse for inflicting it on the baby. Many of these "agreeable" things are responsible for scurvy, rickets, anemia and malnutrition, not to mention diarrhea and "cholera infantum." Determining the proper diet for an artificially fed baby is not a matter of luck; it is a matter of science, and parents who fail to seek medical advice and supervision in this vital matter are false to their trust. Fermentative diarrhea sometimes supervenes upon an acute rhinitis bronchitis. These revulsive illnesses temporarily impair digestion, so that more food remains to ferment in the bowel, unless the baby's diet is reduced considerably during the illness. Overheating from too much clothing in hot weather is a frequent factor in impaired digestion and consequent fermentative diarrhea. Bad milk meaning unclean or unrefrigerated milk in hot weather, is a very important cause of this may trouble. Characteristic of fermentative diarrhea are the sour acid stools, often greenish and containing much mucus

("slime") and the irritation of the skin of the buttock from the acid stools. In severe cases the child becomes very weak—the familiar "cholera infantum."

YOUR NAME

SMITH

By Philip Francis Nowlan
VARIATIONS — Smyth, Smythe; Schmidt; Falter, Lefevre, Favre, Faure.

RACIAL ORIGIN — Anglo-Saxon, old German and old French. SOURCE — An occupation; also geographical.

There was a president of France, not so many years ago, whose name was often in American newspapers and is known to virtually everybody. His name was Felix Faure. You wouldn't think that was the same as Felix Smith—but it is.

Smith is the most widespread family name in the world, bar none. The name of Smith, in its various forms and compounds; not to mention various tongues, occurs thousands of times to a single instance of any other surname, with the sole exception of Jones; but even the Joneses of the world could not hope to poll more than a weak minority vote against the Smiths.

It would be futile to try to tell everything about the Smith names in an article of this size, but just to lay out the ground for future discussions of its various forms, this much may be pointed out:

A smith, in medieval times, was a worker in metal, and the various forms of metal working constituted the largest and most profitable industry of the Middle Ages, thruout Europe.

Smith, Smythe and Smyth come down to us from the old Anglo-Saxon tongue. The word means, specifically, one who smites, the name being from the same root as the verb "to smite." Smyth and Smyth are closer to the original spelling than Smith. Old spellings are "Smethe," "Smyet," "Smyth" and "Smyt."

Schmidt is the German name; Lefevre (de Fevre), Fabre and Faure are French forms developed from the Latin word for Smith, "faber" which also comes down through English "any girl can do those things" if from the medieval English "smeth," meaning a plain, or field.

OHIO CONVENTION GREETSHARDING

"United Militant" Support is Pledged by Buckeye G. O. P.

WASHINGTON — (By Associated Press) — Senator Harding buckled down Thursday to the work of clearing away pending matters preparatory to his departure early Saturday for his home in Marion.

An indication of the reception awaiting him in Marion was given to the nominee today in a telegram from the state convention of Ohio Republicans. The telegram bore to Senator Harding and his family, "We pledge you in behalf of a united and militant party in your native and home state our enthusiastic support until your triumphant election in November. We congratulate the nation that with your inauguration on March 4 next, there will be a return to popular and constitutional government. We congratulate the party upon the fact, that with your accession to the presidency will begin another Republican administration instead of a personal autocratic government—and an administration that will give help and confidence to the people of this country, that will bring peace to America, and will re-establish the government of this country as conceived by the founders."

CITY OFFICIAL SAYS THAT HE HAS BEEN PREJUDICED

Makes Significant Statement Regarding His Opinion of Medicines, But He Found that Nerv-Worth Was Different
When It Gave Desired Results

"I have always been prejudiced against medicine but I am now of a different opinion, for Nerv-Worth is more than a medicine. It's a miracle," said C. W. Whitmer, 210 Hill St., Xenia, Ohio. And he goes on, "I was completely run down and terribly nervous, and I couldn't sleep. I would toss and turn most of the night. Had gas on my stomach, and belched quite some time after eating. I have taken one bottle of Nerv-Worth and been helped marvelously. I have not enjoyed sleep in six months as I do now. I cannot recommend it too highly, for I feel like a different man."

the office of Director of Public Service in this city for four terms. A statement coming from such a man is more than convincing proof. Nerv-Worth has proved a miracle in millions of other cases, just as it has in this case. It acts in a sensible way to bring about the desired results because it is one medicine that acts jointly for the benefitting of stomach and nervous ill. It aids the digestive system, neutralizes excess poisonous acids, drives out impurities, stops gas forming, and at the same time that it does this, it gives nerve force, sound restful sleep, and tones and invigorates the system throughout. If you suffer from ill health, do not hesitate to start at once on Nerv-Worth, for it will do for you what it has done for millions of others in all parts of the country. Take a bottle home and use it according to directions, and if you are not satisfied that it is helping you, your money will be refunded.

DOTTED SWISS IS SUMMER'S CHOICE

Mrs. Carl Means invited a circle of friends to her country home two miles north of Waynesfield on Wednesday. At 1 o'clock a delicious luncheon was served with tables arranged in the dining room and sun porch. A huge basket of pink roses centered the table in the dining room and on the other tables were baskets of pink and lavender sweet peas. The appointments were of pink.

Following the repast brides and social chat were enjoyed on the lawn.

Guests included: Mrs. Henry Newman, Mrs. M. Simmons, Mrs. O. C. Herring, Mrs. William Herring, Mrs. Guy Shaffer, Mrs. Alice Zimmerman, Mrs. Edward Scholten, Mrs. Henry Deissel, Mrs. Harry Thomas, Mrs. Edward Shook, Mrs. Guy Means, of Lima, Mrs. Harry Fisher, Mrs. Frank Zolke, Mrs. Charles Freck, Mrs. M. Rev. Father Plannans, pastor of the St. John's Catholic church, assisted by Rev. Father Shaffer, S. J., officiated. The ceremony was held at 7:30 o'clock at the church. The bride, Miss Anna Scholten, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. R. Scholten, was given away by Henry Heckman.

Miss Clara Scholten, intimate friend of the bride, was the maid of honor. She wore a charming frock of blue crepe de chine with a white hat and she carried pink roses. Theodora Shaffer Jr., brother of the bride, acted as the bride's groom's attendant.

The bride wore a gown of white tulle, tastefully trimmed with orange blossoms. A shower bouquet of bride's roses and lilies of the valley completed her costume.

A wedding dinner was served at the home of the bride's parents by Mrs. John Moore and Miss Mary Shaffer. A huge wedding cake, bearing a miniature bride and groom, centered the bridal table at which were seated: Rev. Father Plannans, Rev. Father Shaffer, maid of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. T. R. Shaffer, Mr. and Mrs. John Moore, groom, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Heckman, Mr. and Mrs. William Weiser, Miss Clara Scholten, Theodore Shaffer, and Mr. and Mrs. Heckman.

The couple left immediately for a wedding trip to Toledo and Detroit, Mich., and upon their return will be at home with the bride's parents.

Mrs. Heckman's going away costume was a blue tulle suit and a small black hat.

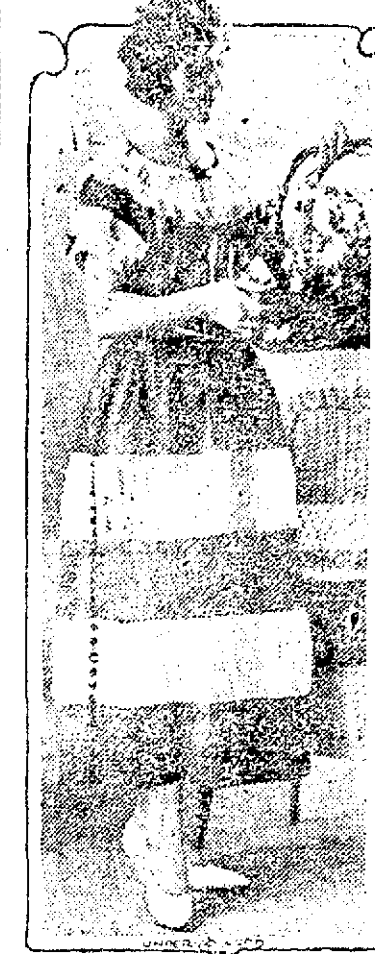

A quiet wedding, at Wednesday, occurred at the home of Rev. A. A. Thomas, pastor of the Second-st. E. church, when Miss Lois C. Cook, 504 E. Center, became the bride of Leroy Dorsey Barnett. The ceremony was read at 8:30 o'clock.

The bride was attired in a gown of white satin and duchess lace. The couple will be at home to their many friends at 529 S. Elizabeth-st., after July 3rd.

By KLOISE

It hardly seems necessary to tell you that dotted swiss is among the most popular of cotton fabrics for summer wear. You must have noticed the window displays of frocks and snooks of this dainty material. In fact it looks very much as if it were the most popular material at least for the hour. In white it is favored for graduation gowns and in colors it makes attractive porch frocks and "cheer" dresses. The styles range from simple and plain with a short sleeved blouse and a gathered skirt trimmed with ruffles or tucks. Swiss is also often combined with other materials, such as organdy and lawn.

Here is a very dainty and attractive little frock which will help make one cool on warm summer days. It is fashioned of brown dotted swiss, combined with plain white organdy. The skirt is full and gathered, with two deep folds of the organdy and covered buttons for trimming. The blouse is also very simple and in keeping with the skirt. It is made in kimono style with a round neck and diminutive sleeves. A deep, round collar and cuffs of pleated organdy edged with lace form the blouse trimming and little tiny bows of brown velvet add the finishing touch to a very youthful and altogether charming mid-summer frock.

Announcement has been made of the marriage of Miss Rowena Kahle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Kahle, W. Market-st., to William Lester Allgier, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Allgier, Elmwood Place. The ceremony took place in Detroit, Mich., on Wednesday afternoon.

Following the ceremony an elaborate dinner was served. Pink roses and poeies centered the table.

Cash Balm For All Disappointments, Thru Insurance

Gotta hunch you may have a rotten time on the Fourth of July with your girl on account of rain? Well, why worry about a little thing like that. Take out an insurance policy. You can.

There's a firm in New York that will take a gambler's chance on the weather with you. Pay a small premium. In case it rains the insurance company will recompense you handsomely.

Suppose your girl blames you for the rain and threatens to ditch you. A snag of balm money from the insurance company will help you to make it right with her via a present. Holiday and vacation insurance against rain is now quite the thing. English companies have been offering it for some time. Now this New York company brings the opportunity close to home.

The company has even gone further and insures gas station owners and refreshment dealers against a poor holiday business thru stormy weather.

A swimming match to be held the Fourth in New York is protected against storm interruption by an insurance policy. It is said it won't be long until a husband can be insured against disappointment thru the failure of his bride-in-law to pay the visit she promised.

WIFE ASKS DIVORCE

That Harold McCoy Swaney, Sanders Hotel, E. Market-st., neglected his family, attending dances, exhibitions, carnivals and entertainments, is the charge made by his wife, Bery, in a suit for divorce. She states that while he received wages in excess of the needs of his family, he raised pay checks and squandered earnings and such funds for his own selfish enjoyment, high living, drinking and poker playing.

Haunting Love Melody

Sounds serious, doesn't it? But only to sweethearts. Seldom do lovers find more delightful music words in a song that appeals to them and the uncertain aspect of Love. "Drifting" is sweeping like a cyclone over the country, and the reason? The charming refrain will answer that.

DRIFTING

The secret of this song's popularity seems to lie in the fact that it is aimed to bring out the voice, containing a number of odd harmonies, although no high notes. The melody blends charmingly with the lyrics and leaves a profound impression on the hearer. This song is splendidly recorded for all phonographs and player pianos.

THE WOMAN WHO LOVED AND EARNED

JANE PHILLIPS

UNDERSTANDING

Robert stared at me in amazement. "You don't mean you have been working in your old place this past month? How could you get dinner and keep the house?"

"I'll tell you how, dear. I talked with Madame, told her I would work doubly hard to make up for the short hours, and then made my own time as I believe many experienced women could do if they tried. Then I hire a woman every Saturday to do all the heavy cleaning, because I have to keep my hands nice to be good customers. I stay with her 3:30—that gives me plenty of time to be at the shop at 10. I lay out all the work she is to do until I get back at 5—I leave the shop at 4. She also takes all the laundry home. I used to do the fine things myself, but it pays better to let her do it. Then it also helps her."

"But—Gerry—I don't see yet how you have been able to do so much, and work in the shop all day."

"System, my dear husband, system. I don't suppose I could do it were it not for my business training. But you don't object, dear, to you?"

"Why—no—I don't see that I have any right to object. I never dreamed you were doing anything different. Why didn't you tell me before?"

"I wanted to try out my theory first. I have always believed a woman could help, could do her share of earning, always supposing she knew how. The reason I fell down at first, Robert, and I did fall down—was that I never had had a home, never had tried to make one. I thought, as you did, that I couldn't do both, and so I chose the shop."

"But I believe any experienced girl, if she isn't too young, can do just what I have done—love a man well enough to make a home for him, and also help him financially, and be all the happier for so doing. This accustomed to routine work days filled with something worth while, can't help but grow discontented with nothing to do save keep two or three tiny rooms clean, and cook two meals a day."

"I guess you are right, Gerry. But will Madame let us pay you enough when you only work such short hours—I mean as much as you are worth?"

"I think so. She offered me $50. And Robert, things cost so much now that we were using every penny you earn to live. Now we can share the expense, and still save."

"No, you'll do the saving. I'll run the house."

"All right! Have it your own way. The savings will come day by day. I'll be home for us, so what difference who saves?"

We said little more, but that night before he slept, Robert said: "You're a wonder, Gerry. I don't know which emotion is the strongest, my love for you, or my pride in you."

"I'd rather it would be the love, Robert."

"I guess it is," he returned sleepily.

Mary and Gardner came in unexpectedly the next evening, and Robert not I, told them.

"You're a great business woman, Gerry!" Gardner said. "I believe it will work out all right."

"HAS worked out," Gardner said. "She has been with Madame a month, and I never have been so comfortable or more happy than this last month."

"I am hiring more done, of course," I interrupted, "so that it won't interfere in any way with the time that belong to Bob."

"It's because you know how to systematize your work that you can make it go; and because you are not foolishly or ignorantly economical. Why should you do the hard work when some poor woman can only support herself if she is hired to do that kind of work? Especially when you have proved that your time is more valuable than hers."

"There's another point too, Gardner. Gerry wants a home in the suburbs some day. And with living mounting as it is, the home was receding pretty rapidly. You see even with a pretty good salary, it takes about all I can earn to keep us. Gerry's $50 will make the home she is planning a possibility some day."

"I think she is right in her planning. Gardner returned and I am not surprised that she grew stale in her house-to-house work. No one can keep up to the scratch all the time unless they have the right surroundings. You nor I could do business very long unless we kept in touch with the trade. Mary and I will be looking out for a place near us. Perhaps you will be able to rent another year with the privilege of buying if you like it. But real estate is too expensive now to think of investing."

"I guess you are right, Gerry. But will Madame let us pay you enough when you only work such short hours—I mean as much as you are worth?"

"I think so. She offered me $50. And Robert, things cost so much now that we were using every penny you don't that most men are tender to the women who is the mother of their children. In the first flush of parenthood at least, I seldom see them afterward.

"Haven't you seen men who were early and unhappy because another child has been born into the family?" I asked curiously.

"Oh, yes, I have many times, but in the end most of them take it philosophically. In fact, much more so than the wives."

"That was because, Miss Parker, you did not hear all that the man said. The wife had said that no one but she could know."

"Don't you like men, Mrs. Gordon?"

"Individually, yes, very much; in the mass not at all."

DIARY OF AN ENGAGED GIRL

BY PHYLIS PHILLIPS

Filled with an infinite melancholy, such as is foreign to my sunny nature, I descended to the family breakfast table this morning and partook of my meal in silence.

After breakfast she followed me into my room, and put her arms round me and kissed me to tell her what was troubling me. Of course I couldn't tell anything, but I did sketch an outline of my feelings about being sent up to Boston, and about many other things.

As usual she was sympathetic and incidentally told me that Cecil had asked her to ask me to meet him at the Metropolitan Museum at one o'clock. She looked at me searchingly as she told me this, but believe me, I am so weary of men and the problems they bring to the heart and soul of young womanhood that I did not bat an eyelash under her scrutiny.

With a sweetly-weary smile I asked her not to forget that I was expecting to go down to "Hope Hamlet" on the morrow, or next day at latest, and that she had promised Dorcy and Jean to come along too.

I know that that little visit will help much. I also know that I am hungry for a sight of the friends that I love, and who love me, with all my faults and in spite of them.

While we were talking, Morgan Travers called me up and asked me if I could come on down and pose for him in the morning, as he was hard pressed for a model, and so on and so forth. He got me in the right mood, for I promised him to be at his studio at tea in the morning, rain or shine, and felt better after I had done so.

Ant Cecilia sort of smiled at me, when I told her. "After all, Lindsey, you are exactly like myself, you simply have to go through things yourself, and maybe it is better after I had done so."

It was grotesquely funny. Morgan Travers — an out and out Bohemian, an artist, a will-o'-the-wisp if there ever was one—being engaged to this conservative, calm, unimaginative piece of femininity, from the eternally protected and hedged-in samples of girlhood that are turned out by the dozens in our own set each year, and handed over to helpless young husbands untested. It's tragic. You at least face the facts of life, and you are willing to pay the price for your adventures. That is a fine thing.

We had a grand old gossip then, and afterwards I went to Laura Edmonds' house for luncheon.

I must say that it was a better one than I had prepared for her mother, and Laura made an excellent hostess. There were several girls that I had gone to school with present, and we had a fairly good time. I must say that I have left these old friends far behind. We think in different spheres now, and as for Laura! Well, you can imagine my surprise, my horror almost, when at the end of the luncheon she announced her engagement to Morgan Travers!

THE WOMAN WHO LOVED AND EARNED

UNDERSTANDING

Robert stared at me in amazement. "You don't mean you have been working in your old place this past month? How could you get dinners and keep the house?"

"I'll tell you how, dear. I talked with Madame, told her I would work doubly hard to make up for the short hours, and then made my own time as I believe many experienced women could do if they tried. "System, my dear husband, system. I don't suppose I could do it were it not for my business training. But you don't object, dear, to you?"

"Why—no—I don't see that I have any right to object. I never dreamed you were doing anything different. Why didn't you tell me before?"

"I wanted to try out my theory first. I have always believed a woman could help, could do her share of earning, always supposing she knew how. What is accustomed to routine work, days filled with something worth while, can't help but grow discontented with nothing to do save keep two or three tiny rooms clean, and cook two meals a day."

"I guess you are right, Gerry. "But will Madame Leets pay you enough when you only work such short hours? I mean as much as you are worth?"

"I think so. She offered me $50. And Robert, things cost so much now that we were using every penny you earn to live. Now we can share the expense, and still save."

"No, you'll do the saving. I'll run the house."

"All right! have it your own way. The savings will some day go into a home for us, so what difference does it make?"

We said little more, but that night before he slept, Robert said:

"You're a wonder, Gerry. I don't know which emotion is the strongest tonight, my love for you, or my pride in you."

"I'd rather it would be the love, Robert."

"I guess it is," he returned sleepily.

Mary and Gardner came in unexpectedly the next evening, and Robert not I, told them.

"You're a great business woman, Gerry," Gardner said. "I believe it will work out all right."

"It HAS worked out, Gardner," Robert went on. "She has near with Madame a month, and I never have been so comfortable or more happy than this last month."

"I am hiring more done, of course," I interrupted, "so that it won't interfere in any way with the time that belong to Bob."

"It's because you know how to systematize your work that you can make it go, and because you are not foolishly or ignorantly economical. Why should you do the hard work when some poor woman can only support herself if she is hired to do that kind of work? Especially when you have proved that your time is more valuable than hers."

"There's another point too, Gardner. Gerry wants a home in the suburbs some day. And with living mounting as it is, the home was receding pretty rapidly. You see even with a pretty good salary, it takes about all I can earn to keep us. Gerry's $50 will make the home she is planning a possibility some day."

"I think she is right in her planning," Gardner returned and I am not surprised that she grew stale in her house-to-house work. No one can keep up to the scratch all the time unless they have the right surroundings. You nor I could do business very long unless we kept in touch with the trade. Mary and I will be looking out for a place near us. Perhaps you will be able to rent another year with the privilege of buying if you like it. But real estate is too expensive now to think of investing."

don, that most men are tender to the woman who is the mother of their children, in the first flush of parenthood at least. I seldom see them afterward.

"Haven't you seen men who were early and unhappy because another child has been born into the family?" I asked curiously.

"Oh, yes. I have many times, but in the end most of them take it philosophically. In fact, much more so than the wives."

"That was because, Miss Parker, you did not hear all that the man said. The wife had said that no one but she could know."

"Don't you like men, Mrs. Gordon?"

"Individually, yes, very much; in the mass not at all."

Charles' Manner Fatherly

They all tramped down to the station. Ruth innocently remarking as Charles trundled the carriage that he had a very fatherly air, and then meeting the splash of color which suddenly appeared in his face with a blush that reddened her fair skin up to the roots of her hair.

I congratulated myself upon my thoughtfulness. I did not smile or act in any way to indicate that I had noticed anything except the obviousness of Ruth's remark, and I said: "Yes, Charles, you know, is god-father to Mary." At which both of them looked relieved.

When we were settled in the train Miss Parker, the baby and I, Charles and Ruth left us. I watched them out of sight, walking side by side. Little Ruth astride Charles' shoulder and her hands playing among his thick, whitening locks.

"What a splendid couple they would make," said Miss Parker. Mr. Charles seems so fond of children."

"Yes, he is just the kind of a man to marry a ready-made family," and I felt my lips curl into a smile as I thought how sweet and kind Charles would be to those children.

"It is almost too good to be true," I said. "Blind fate seldom brings two persons together who would be so happy as my Cousin Charles and Ruth Gaylord."

"Oh, do you really think that, Mrs. Gordon?" asked Miss Parker with the eagerness of a woman of 35 who has never married.

"Don't you?" I parried. "You must have seen many unhappily married couples."

DIARY OF AN ENGAGED GIRL

BY PHILLIS PHILLIPS

Filled with an infinite melancholy, such as is foreign to my sunny nature, I descended to the family breakfast table this morning and partook of my meal in silence.

Aunt Cecile thought that I must be ill, but I shook my head at her, and said it was a century-old illness—of the spirit only.

After breakfast she followed me into my room, and put her arms round me and kissed me to tell her what was troubling me. Of course I couldn't tell everything, but I did sketch an outline of my feelings about being sent up to Boston, and about many other things.

As usual she was sympathetic, and incidentally told me that Cecil had asked her to ask me to meet him at the Metropolitan Museum at one o'clock. She looked at me searchingly as she told me this, but believe me, I am so weary of men and the problems they bring to the heart and soul of young womanhood that I did not bat an eyelid under her scrutiny.

With a sweetly-weary smile I asked her not to forget that I was expecting to go down to "Hope Hamlet" on the morrow, or next day at latest, and that she had promised Dorry and Jean to come along too.

I know that that little visit will help much. I also know that I am hungering for a sight of the friends that I love, and who love me, with all my faults and in spite of them.

While we were talking, Morgan Travers called me up and asked me if I could come on down and pose for him in the morning, as he was hard pressed for a model, and so on and so forth. He got me in the right mood, for I promised him to be at his studio at ten in the morning, rain or shine, and felt better after I had done so.

Aunt Cecile sort of smiled at me, when I told her. "After all, Lindsey, you are exactly like myself, you simply have to go through things yourself, and maybe it is better all round. Lord deliver us from the eternally protected and hedged-in shelter of girlhood that love is turned out by the door in our own set each year, and handed over to helpless young husbands untested. It's tragic. You at least face the facts of life, and you are willing to pay the price for your adventures. That is a fine thing, little girl."

We had a grand old gossip then, and afterwards I went to Laura Edmonds' house for luncheon.

I must say that it was a better one than I had prepared for her mother, and Laura made an excellent hostess. There were several girls that I had gone to school with present, and we had a fairly good time. I must say that I have left these old friends far behind. We think in different spheres now, and as Laura said, "Well, you can imagine my surprise, my horror almost, when at the end of the luncheon she announced her engagement to Morgan Travers!"

It was grotesquely funny. Morgan Travers—an out and out Bohemian, an artist, a will-o'-the-wisp if there ever was one—being engaged to this conservative, calm, unimaginative piece of femininity, with Tradition and Time behind her, where he needed but color and love! It was too much. And, I Lindsey, artist, dreamer, home vivrant, butterfly, whirligig, engaged to a conservative, respectable, home-loving man, whose idea of color was expressed in the green of my eyes—well, there you are. That's how human beings go and mess up each others' lives. Is it any wonder there are so many divorces in America?

You Have Plenty of Time to Enter the Doughboy Flour Contest

We feel that there are a great many persons living in Lima and vicinity who have not had sufficient time to enter the Doughboy Flour Contest and tell us, in a short verse, letter or limerick, why they believe is

"The Country's Best"

In order that these persons may have an opportunity to enter the contest and prepare their answers, we have extended the closing time of the contest from June 25th, 1920, as originally announced, until a future date.

It's an easy contest from start to finish. Here's an answer from a lady living on West Market Street that will give you an idea of the kind of an answer we want—

"I've tried them all," said Mrs. Lauer,
"In biscuits, pies and cake;
But none compare with Doughboy Flour,
No matter what you bake."

Surely you can do as well! Think what splendid compensation the first award would be for a little limerick or verse along this line! Enough to buy you a new outfit and pay your expenses to a summer resort! Even the smallest award would buy a lot of things you want. Look them over—

$100 for the best answer telling why Doughboy Flour is "The Country's Best".

$50 for the second best answer telling why Doughboy Flour is "The Country's Best".

$25 for the third best answer telling why Doughboy Flour is "The Country's Best".

A Clean Collar and a Clean Mouth

Yesterday's collar laid aside this morning for a clean one usually isn't really dirty at all.

It just doesn't feel fresh. So a man will think little of the laundry cost, for the sake of the clean-collar sensation.

The mouth and teeth really need cleaning in the morning. And they also need that fresh, pure, spotlessly clean feeling that a newly-laundered collar has.

You can get from Pebecco Tooth Paste a sensation of extra freshness, extra cleanness, that almost adds brilliance to your breakfast conversation.

And the cost of a fresh-feeling mouth compared with the cost of a clean collar every day is too low to be figured.

PITCHER WINS DAY DESPITE RUTH'S TWO HOMERS

By JOE BERNSTEIN

WITH BABE RUTH'S double circuit smash of two home runs at Philadelphia Wednesday, the big leagues, odd enough to say, saw a one hit pitcher's battle between the Pirates and the Cubs. Seems almost impossible in these days of hitting, but the records have it so, and so it will be.

Jim Vaughn of the Cubs was the hero of the day, and considering the scarcity of such pitching these days, and the plentiful supply of home runs clouted out, he is unquestionably entitled to the limelight over Babe Ruth.

Out of the five hits that his team mates managed to glean from Ponder of Pittsburgh, the Cubs managed to get a one run victory over the Pittsburgh outfit.

And while these phenomena were occurring, the Reds evened up their series with the Cardinals by counting a victory while Cleveland engaged in a slugfest with the St. Louis Browns. Cleveland lost, sad to say, to the tune of 10 to 8, but the defeat failed to oust them from the first position.

Babe Ruth stands just five runs away from his last year's record of 29 at present. His second clout of Wednesday made his record at present read 24 circuits for the season, to date, while his first broke a tie that won the first game of a doubleheader for the Yanks. It is one of the few smashes of the year with which the big boy has won games for his team.

The home run has even become an epidemic in the minors. Barney of the Buffalo International team swatted out a homer that counted a victory for his team over Toronto, Wednesday.

Wheat was credited largely for the double victory of the Brooklyn's double victory over the Giants yesterday, because of his hitting.

LIMA GOING BASEBALL MAD

Looks like Lima is going baseball mad.

After watching the Independents go to it every Sunday afternoon that there isn't any rain, the fans of the city get out themselves and hammer the ball around a little. Kiwanis club and Rotary started it when they challenged and accepted.

Now, the Doctors have addressed a very business like looking challenge to the Lawyers of the city. They intend to beat the attorneys. Monday morning, July 5th at the Murphy-st. diamond. The Medics have already made all arrangements, they announce, and all they need to complete the game is their challenged opposition.

Rotary and Kiwanis teams have been practicing their 22 and expect to get together soon.

The Central fire department diamond has challenged a team from the Lima News and Times-Democrat and the scribbs have accepted. Then came too, will be played Monday morning, but the scene of the action will be the college grounds.

Everybody's playing ball in Lima.

PLENTY DOING FOR FOURTH

Fourth of July is going to be fittingly celebrated by sport fans in Lima. Plenty of action has been arranged by the sport promoters in this vicinity for both Sunday and Monday.

Bernie Holleran scheduled three games are sure to afford a good number a real opportunity to see some baseball while the variegated races at the Fair grounds Monday afternoon will add to the pep.

The Chicago Keystones will be here Sunday afternoon to meet the Independents. Monday's program at Murphy-st park will be a doubleheader with the Keystones on the bill for the second game and the Celina team for the opener.

There might have been another report added to the activities of the day if the sheriff hadn't interfered and said there could be no boxing at the Fair grounds. Walter Perry was planning a card for the occasion but his plans were nipped in the bud by Sheriff Baxter who said nix.

Nevertheless there'll be plenty doing with three baseball games and a program of motorcycle, bicycle, truck and Ford races on the schedule.

TITLE BOUT THIS YEAR ANYWAY

Even if the big heavyweights aren't going to get together this year, there's going to be a championship bout and said championship bout is attracting no little attention.

Benton Harbor, Michigan, is to be the scene of action and Bernie Leonard and Charley White are principals. It's unquestionably the best match made in the past number of years in lightweight class and is entitled to all the attention that it is drawing. If the heavy boys won't get together this year, the light ones will and it's a lot more interesting to watch a lightweight scrap than a heavyweight mill.

Babe Ruth, Modest, Despite Heaps O' Honors

By Jack Keene

The wonder of it all is that Babe Ruth can remain his natural self these days. Millions of fans are proclaiming him the greatest player the grand old game of baseball ever has known, or ever will see. Hundreds of newspapers and periodicals are printing columns of pictures of stories about him. He is followed about wherever he goes by a throng that would cause a motion picture star to die with delight.

But in spite of all these conditions Ruth apparently hasn't changed a particle. And therein lies another indication of his general greatness. No man can be truly big in any game in life unless he is big of brain and heart.

You'd think, off hand, that Babe Ruth would be beset with the fear that some accident, some unkind trick of fate, would deprive him suddenly of his wonderful batting eyes or his marvelous physique. That doesn't worry him a bit. You know the thing that worries that big man?

The fear that some day he'll main or kill a pitcher or infielder with one of his terrific shouts.

That's right.

"It's the one thing I've always dreaded ever since I began to hammer the ball. I try not to hit the ball back to the pitcher. We're all in the game to make a living and I wouldn't want to deliberately hurt a lot of other fellows," said Babe the other day. Then he went on to tell how his heart "almost stood still" one day in Detroit when he slammed one of Rhincke's shots and the ball went straight back to the hurler like a bullet.

"I was afraid he wouldn't get his hands up in time to protect himself," said Babe.

To my mind this is an interesting sidelight on Babe Ruth's makeup. Here is a physical giant going to the plate day in and day out with his mind intent upon one thing — to hit the ball harder than it ever has been slammed before. He knows he can do it. And he knows that he can deal out possible death with one of those roundhouse swings of his. And he is big enough to realize that while the public might feel right about it, he wouldn't if one of his drives should put some player out of the game permanently.

Guess he's some little old sportsman, this Babe Ruth.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

A Scotch golf enthusiast, who was too polite to make a face-to-face protest against another player's objectionable manners, but too aggrieved to remain silent, recently inserted this advertisement in the "agony columns" of several London newspapers:

"Would the individual with the handicap of eighteen and the large voice who back his way round a certain suburban course, reflect that his golfing adventures do not interest other members to the extent he would think."

EASTERN TRACK MEN HOLD EDGE

The chances of Eastern and Western college athletes to win places on the Olympic team appear to be pretty evenly balanced. The records made in the recent Western conference games, when compared with those made at Franklin Field in the intercollegiate, leave little to choose, though the intercollegiate developed slightly better figures in all but the half mile and the two sprints, the 100 and the 220.

Scholl's Western time of 10 sec. was equaled by both LeConey, of Lafayette, and Kirksey, of Leland Stanford in the trials at Philadelphia, but neither of these men took part in the final. Weather and track conditions, however, were better at Franklin Field than they were for the Western games.

There were two events in the conference meet that were not contested in the intercollegiate—the javelin and the discus. Higgins, of Chicago, won the discus with a throw of 140 feet, 8 inches. Hoffman, of Michigan, took first in the javelin with a throw of 172 feet, 9 inches. This throw bettered the winning throw of Barels, Penn's star, in the recent relay by a full ten feet.

The figures for the two big college meets follow:

100 yards—East, 10 1-5 sec.; West, 10 sec.

220 yards—East, 21 4-5 sec.; West, 21 3-5 sec.

440 yards—East, 48 2-5 sec.; West, 48 4-5 sec.

880 yards—East, 1 min. 58 sec.; West, 1 min. 54 1-5 sec.

One mile—East, 4 min. 22 2-3 sec.; West, 4 min. 28 2-5 sec.

Two miles—East 9 min. 37 3-5 sec.; West, 9 min. 33 sec.

High hurdles—East, 14 2-5 sec.; West, 15 3-5 sec.

Low hurdles—East, 20 4-5 sec.; West, 25 5-5 sec.

Shot—East, 45 ft. 10 1-2 in.; West, 43 ft. 11 in.

Hammer—East, 159 ft. 2 3-4 in.; West, 157 ft. 7 in.

PENTATHALON TRIALS ON 4TH

NEW YORK — The national pentathlon championship, constituting also the final Olympic trials for this event, will be the big feature of the spring games of the Loughlin Lyceum here Sunday afternoon.

Lieut. Harry Liverdise, of the Marines, former all-around star of the University of California; Carl Gunther, of Colorado; Ensign D. H. Pakrey and V. O. Clapp have been entered by the United States Navy.

Other stars who will try for the team are Bill Yount, of the University of Southern California and Alma Richards, of Salt Lake City.

The decathlon finds to be held here July 9 and 10 probably will have the same starters in addition to S. Harrison Thomson, Princeton, the national champion; Bob LeGendre, the collegiate champion of Georgetown, and others.

DEMPSEY HOT AFTER BIG 'CARP'

NEW YORK — Jack Dempsey is coming to New York after Georges Carpentier, the European champion, and alleged challenger for the world's title.

In a statement wired from Denver, Jack Kearns, manager of the champion, said they would be in New York not later than July 7.

Kearns is coming to see that the Frenchman talks business before he leaves for home July 10, he said.

"If Carpentier really did come to America to fight Dempsey, as he claims he did, let him do so at once. I am ready to sign."

"I accepted a challenge from Carpentier two weeks ago and gave him a week to reply. Since then I haven't had a line from him."

"I am going to have a personal interview with Descamps in New York and put it up to him flat to fight or quit talking. If he doesn't want to fight we will accept an offer to fight some American at once."

BOTTOM DOES OLE GOOD

Ivan Olson will probably improve in his stickwork as a result of being dropped down near the tail end of the Dodgers' batting array by Manager Robinson. The aggressive infielder has swapped places with Pete Kilduff, who until recently was the seventh Robin to step to the plate.

Until the change was made, Olson as lead off man went through four consecutive games without drawing a pass. The first time up in his new berth he succeeded in drawing a base on balls and the next time up hit safely to left. In his next two chances to hit safely he failed to reach first. Olson succeeded Ollie O'Mara as the team's lead off man when Ollie was sent to the minors.

FITZGERALD TALE IN MOVIES

Literary Sensation of America
Adaptable Stories
HE'S YOUNG, GIRLS—ONLY 23
Productions Follow Modern Trend
—News of Theaters

(BY ESTHER WAGNER)
SCOTT FITZGERALD'S stories have reached the movies. The first is "The Chorus Girl's Romance," made from his tale "Head and Shoulders." Fitzgerald is the literary sensation of the season in America. Most of the talk about him has developed since recent publication of the first novel, "This Side of Paradise." But there is reason to think that equal, perhaps greater, merit is to be found in some of his short stories now being printed in three or four magazines—Scribner's, Smart Set, Saturday Evening Post. Fitzgerald is 23. So naturally most of the discussion is whether he is a rocket, or will develop in talent and achievement. So far, he has been writing mostly about tony flappers, and about their fashionable men friends approaching at, or just out of college.

SUITED
This is stuff particularly suited to the movies. For there are a lot of pretty young girls in the movies whom audiences like to see. And about all the movie producers have found for them so far has been the myriad modern variations of the ancient tale of Cinderella.

The poor miss in humble quarters meets a prince—the modern equivalent is a young millionaire—and he marries her. Fade-out. Good-night. Fitzgerald's stories have more heft. Or at least, they're not merely sentimental. They're too modern for that. He hits along, rather, in the trail blazed by some of the younger writers in England—MacKenzie, Lawrence, Lyons.

NEW YORK — Prospects of another flurry in call money were reflected in the uneven trend of the market session. Crucible Steel's initial advance of two points was immediately followed by a retracement of half its rise. Atlantic Gulf, Industrial Alcohol, Baldwin Locomotive, Studebaker, United States Rubber and Beet Sugar were included among the other steady firm issues, but Mexican Petroleum, Consolidated Gas and several of the Foreign and granger railway shares yielded moderately to pressure.

The market improved on very light dealings during the morning although call loans opened at 10 per cent, the highest initial rate in several weeks. Express company issues substantially enhanced their recent advances and shipplings strengthened on no crute basis. The Atlantic Gulf and United Fruit, Crucible, Republic and Baldwin featured the steels and equipments and tobacco, sugar and chemical shares were responsive to the more confident operations of pools but rails remained dull and granger shares in the bond market the outstanding feature. Strength and activity of Belgian 7-1/2's.

MUTT AND JEFF—SPEAKING OF INSECTS, HOW ABOUT THIS POOR FISH?

By BUD FISHER

Short Shavings

The cherry caller tried to persuade old Aunt Martha not to dwell upon her troubles, telling her that

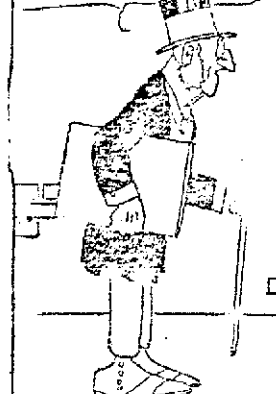

"Well, honey," said the old lady, "I dunno 'bout dat. I allus 'lowed when de Lord send me tribulation He done spes me to tribulate."

"Do you enjoy Mendelssohn's songs without words?" "I don't know as I've heard 'em," replied Mr. Curox. "But I want to say that Mendelssohn has the right idea. What keeps a lot of these songs from being fit to listen to is the words."

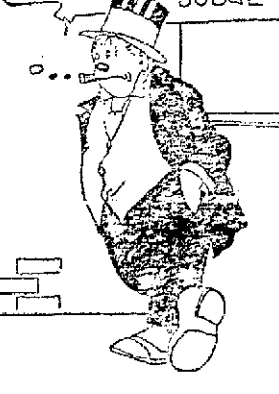

"What is 'obscurity,' Tommie?"

DURING HER—

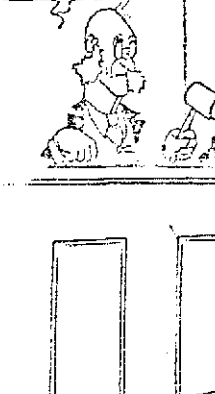

HELLO JIGGS, COME AND SIT ON THE BENCH WITH ME THIS MORNING.

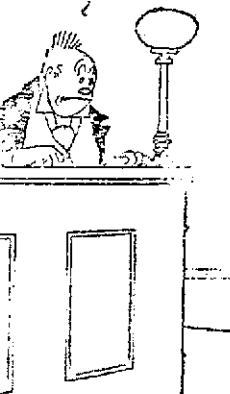

ALL RIGHT JUDGE IT'LL BE A NEW SENSATION. I'VE ALWAYS FACED A JUDGE.

ORDER IN THE COURT!

The teacher asked, "It's a place, I guess," Tommie answered. "No, no. Why do you say that?" "Must be, because that's where a lot of candidates go after an election."

"You know, darling, you need never be frightened in the dark. There are always angels around your bed, guarding you with their wings." "Oh, mammy! I hope one won't settle on me!" "I wouldn't have my boy taught grammar at all, if I had my way."

"That's a strange idea. Why of?" "I intend that he shall be a writer of popular songs."

ABA—Business places of the city are to close on Monday, July 5 in celebration of Independence Day.

"That's a strange idea. Why of?" "I intend that he shall be a writer of popular songs."
